Dear Madam, dear Sir,

The competence for issuing, organising, implementing and evaluating Continuing Education Programmes lies with the Medical Specialty Societies, who are in charge of awarding CME credits.

The review and accreditation of Continuing Education Events is organised as followed:

The SIME accredits exclusively non-specific events in the following domains: ethics, health economics, medico-actuarial science, security of patients, risk management, fault management, management / leadership, teaching, communication, medical law, medical emergency service, evidence based medicine, medical decision making, medical statistics, application of «new media» (e.g. internet research of literature), trendsetting research and technology as well as radiation protection. For further information we invite you to visit our website (German and French).

All other specific medical events lie with the Medical Specialty Societies, who are in charge of awarding CME credits.

With kind regards,

Ramona Gut
